

BANKS, Skinnydipped

I am a little late
Get your water for the wait

I dabble in the past,
I said it
I finally admit it
I told you it was over
Then I skinny-dipped and did it
I should've known better
But I didn't overthink it
And I probably would've floated
But I sank it
Took a dive in the deep
And forgot to move
Swam with the fish til my kiss turn blue
I aired out my sheets
Cuz they smell like you
I cleaned out the salt in my wounds

I am a little late
Get your water for the wait
Take you out onto the lake
and then I'll let you swim away

I step on every crack gimme credit
Your ego never fed it
My legs just caught a cold and so I didn't wanna spread it
You told me if I tried to walk away I would regret it Maybe if I didn't swim I woulda sweat it?
Used to read every story about me and you Checked out your book now it's overdue
I tried to return cuz I'm over you
I cleaned out the salt in my wounds

I am a little late
Get your water for the wait
and then I'll let you swim away

acting like you know me instead of tryna show me say you praise my body i could love somebody else better if i was lonely justified to hold me maybe if i was the only better i woulda know better

I am a little late
and then I'll let you swim away
