Bob Seger, Won

You can cry if you want to, you can rage at the night You can blame all your wounds on the workd if you like YOu can drink from the bottle no ice and no glass You can lie in the mornin' and say it's our last But you won't stop there, no you won't stop there You can tell yourself different but you won't stop there

You can study the ancients, you can learn every fact You can follow the cycles that leave and come back How everything changes, it's been ever thus One day you're a comet the next day you're dust But you won't stop there, no you won't stop there There's always the future and you won't stop there

Tyrants and kings do their usual things And you try to stay out of their way Follow the truth and you'll find what you need every day

There's always tomorrow, always a chance You can stand in the spotlight and not have to dance You can find something solid,stronger than steel And it might touch your heart 'cause it just might be real But you won't stop there, no you won't stop there It's not in your nature and you won't stop there No you won't stop there, no you won't stop there There's always tomorrow so you won't stop there.
