

Brymir , For Those Who Died

Gone was the pain with the light of day
Granting a glimpse of paradise
One last breath remains to breathe
But the hatred still turns inside of us
For the vows and promises of glorious return
And a last hope for deliverance
As silence descends, I cry:
Oh, we were alive!

Now this is for all those who died
For their names, forever undone
By their valor, we'll light up the stars
With the fire they held in their hearts

Burning! The cold hand of death
Reaching out for my lifeblood
Forever has come to claim us, as we die
Memories rise, with the world turning dim
To caress me in the star-light
Of life and death, none will remain
Remember my name!

None will remain
Remember my name!

Odin's embrace, Valhalla awaits

Now this is for all those who died
For their names, forever undone
By their valor, we'll light up the stars
With the fire they held in their hearts
