

Cher Lloyd, Sirens

I carry the weight of you in my heavy heart.
And the wind is so icy, I am numb.
I carry the weight of you hitting back to start.
With the thousand eyes on me
I stumble on.

I am tired, I'm growing older.
I'm getting weaker every day...
I carry the weight of you.
I carry the weight of you.

Lay down here, beside me in the shadow water.
Beside me, where the sun is shining on a still.
Lay down here, beside me in the hallowed water.
Beside me, where with the silver lining stays until
The sirens? calling.

We follow the sun down low till we hit the night.
And you hold me so tightly it's hard to breath.

And I'm tired, I'm growing older.
I'm getting weaker every day.
We follow the sun down low.
We follow the sun down low.

Lay down here, beside me in the shadow water.
Beside me, where the sun is shining on a stil.
Lay down now here, beside me in the hallowed water.
Beside me, where the silver the silver lining stays until
The sirens? calling...
The sirens? calling.

Yeah, I'm tired, I'm growing older.
I'm getting weaker everyday, yeah.
I am drowning, and you're stealing every breath...
Take me away and just...

Lay down here, beside me in the shadow water.
Beside me where the sun is shining on a still.
Lay down here, beside me in the hallowed water.
Beside me where the silver lightning stays until
The sirens? calling...
The sirens? calling.