

Ed Sheeran, Midnight

Well, good morning, dear
What a way to start the day
With everything laid out
Here on the pillow like a friend

If I could capture every fleck of light
I'd capture all and everythin'
And I wager that nobody's ever felt the way we feel
And I ask you to be all the life
I knew for every second of our ups and downs
They turn around like grass upon the wheel
Like grass upon the wheel

Well, I get lost inside my head
In this chaos, you're my calm
And I will find my feet again
'Cause even the worst days of my life will always end

At midnight in your arms
At midnight in your arms

Sorry I missed your call
It was hidin' from the sun
And, you know, when you're free to talk
I won't miss it for the world, no, I won't

I could not wish for more in life
Than just to hear, to when you smile
I could go blind and I'll still know your scent
Whenever you'd appear
I have moments when I doubt myself
But feeling low should still be felt
It's natural to be consumed with unrelentin' fear
With unrelentin' fear

I worry till there's nothin' left
But, in this darkness, you're my sun
And I will find my feet again
'Cause even the worst days of my life will always end

At midnight in your arms, hey, hey
At midnight in your arms, hey, hey
At midnight in your arms, hey, hey
At midnight in your arms, hey, hey
At midnight in your arms
