Evermore, Running

Too many words, too many lies I can't quite see the truth When I look into your eyes I feel I could And I know I should Step away, turn around Let my feet hit the ground Running Running Running Running

You don't need a broken heart To know a heart can be broken You just need to open your eyes We don't need to be decieved To know a lie can be spoken We don't have to learn everything twice

I don't know, I really don't know If this castle in the sand Is strong enough to stand

Clouds come down Clouds come down

I feel I could And I know I should Step away, turn around Let my feet hit the ground Running Running Running Running

You don't need a broken heart To know a heart can be broken You just need to open your eyes We don't need to be decieved To know a lie can be spoken We don't have to learn everything twice

Cos I know how it feels All the pain is so real Cos you sink and you drown 'Till your feet hit the ground Running Running Running Running

Cos you don't need a broken heart To know a heart can be broken You just need to open your eyes And we don't need a TV show To show us which way to go We just need to do what we know

Whoa