Expatriate, You Were There

Oh you were there When I came to There was nothing you could say Nothing you could do

Well I held in my hand, desire It was all of you, all fire

Oh big black eyes On a green hill Won't you come down here And hang around still

Come swim with me In the sea of love Where the fiends and hounds Won't ever get to us

We'll take a deep breath And go below Where the ocean has left Words on a boat, words on a boat

Well I held in my hand, desire It was all of you, it was all fire
