

Faith No More, The Cowboy Song

Tears fall, they scarred your innocent dreams
Loves fall, they kinda leave you empty
Leaves fall, the seasons pass you by
And you think that maybe you can fly

Ceilings fall, with each romance you incur
Clouds fall, with each moment of despair
Buildings fall, the pavement is their bed
But what's the last thing that goes through your head?

You take the elevator to the top
The next thing you know
There you are standing on the edge
And all the flashing lights and futile cries
Just close your eyes and take that final step

Rains fall, they dampen your will to live
Gods fall, with each pleasure that you give
You fall, and take the whole world with you
But will you even bother to look down?

You take the elevator to the top
The next thing you know
There you are standing on the edge
The circumstance it turns you inside out
So we can have peace
Before you find out what's inside your head

What's inside your head!

You take the elevator to the top
The next thing you know
There you are standing on the edge
The circumstance it turns you inside out
So we can have peace
Before you find out what's inside your head
And all the flashing lights and futile cries
Just close your eyes and take that final step
Just close your eyes and take that final step
