

Folkearth, In Odin's Court

"And lo, do I see my father
And lo, do I see my mother
And my sisters and my brothers
And the line of my people

Back to the beginning
And lo, they do call me
In the halls of Valhalla
Where the brave may live forever";

From death's embrace I awaken
Clutching the sword my life had taken;
Roofs thatched with gold
Songs of warriors old
In Odin's court

My eyes behold splendor untold
What be this place?
What maiden brought my soul herein?
These are the halls
Of glorious Valhalla

Step forth ye hammerheart
Blessed champion of the Gods
Heimdall will guard it
Vidar will welcome

In Odin's court our einherjer brethren
Come o beloved of the raven
Feast on flesh and mead
Forever and all time

Till Ragnarok arrives
These are the halls
Of mighty Valhalla

Heimdall will guard it
Vidar will welcome
In Odin's court
In Odin's court

I return to the ancient tree;
What was, shall forever be
Every niche resounds eternally
Warlike triumphant song
There, in Odin's court
