Jimmy Buffett, Ringling, Ringling

Ringling, Ringling Slippin' away Only forty people, livin' there today Streets are dusty and the bank has been torn down It's a dyin' little town

Church windows broken
That place ain't been used in years
Jail don't have a sheriff or a cell
And electric trains they run by maybe once or twice a month
Easin' it on down to Musselshell

Ringling, Ringling Slippin' away Only forty people livin' there today `Cause the streets are dusty and the bank had been torn down It's a dyin' little town

And across from the bar there's a pile of beer cans Been there twenty-seven years Imagine all the heart aches and tears In twenty-seven years of beer

So we hopped back in the rental car and we hit the cruise control Pretty soon the town was out of sight Though we left behind a fat barmaid, a cowboy and a dog Racin' for a Ringling Friday night

Ringling, Ringling Your just slippin' away I wonder how many people will be there a year from today `Cause the streets are dusty and the bank has been torn down It's a dyin' little town It's a dyin' little town
