Juliets Wishing Well, Just Once

there's a man lives right outside my door lives on the hardwood floor where he was born he was brought here against his will but he lives there still to this day and i never knew he was out there and now i can't look away he stands out in the rain tries to fake a smile says i'd like to touch the sky just once i know a girl she likes to dance and her feet by chance do the same she talks to me in a parking lot seems a good spot to make a friend she walks away and my eyes burn as i watch her turn for one day she stands out in the rain she tries to fake a smile says i'd like to touch the sky then they met one day on a mountain peak playing hide and seek in the dark he opened up his eyes which were always shut and she helped him up as far as he could go but his roots they were dry so he tried and tried and tried and tried and tried he stands out in the rain and he tries to fake a smile cause he couldn't touch the sky