

Marjorie Fair, How Can You Laugh?

How can you laugh
when you say the same things too
how can you laugh
when you do the same things too

that's not the same thing that I would've said If your mind was spinning inside of your head that's not the same thing that I would've done If I was your mother and you were my son

how can you sigh
when you say the same things too
how can you sigh
when you do the same things too

that' not the same thing that I would've said If your mind was spinning inside of your head
that's not the same thing that I would've done If I was your father and you were my son

that's not the same thing that I would've said If your heart was locked up inside of your head that's not the same thing that I would've done If I was your lover and you were the one

how can you laugh
when you say the same things too my love?
