

Road Trip's Over, The End Song

Maybe he's not good enough for her
There's so many things he will never learn
He always will pretend, that he is listening to her
She remembers all the days they've shared
But she can't tell where she made mistakes
And now she wonders why
He makes her fall behind

refren:

She knows, she has in face the truth
He won't return her calls
There's nothing that she wouldn't do
To stop the light go dim
It all still seems so clear
She'd better move along
And start getting over him
Is this the end song?
But there's something
What they both should know
It's so hard to find before even looking for There's no point to always feel confused

refren:

She knows, she has in face the truth
He won't return her calls
There's nothing that she wouldn't do
To stop the light go dim
It all still seems so clear
She'd better move along
And start getting over him
Is this the end song?
So ask yourself what you looking for
Why you have feel alone, all alone?
Stay up tonight look out the window
The sky seems to be so clear
Wait for a shooting star and make a wish

refren:

She knows, she has in face the truth
He won't return her calls
There's nothing that she wouldn't do
To stop the light go dim
It all still seems so clear
She'd better move along
And start getting over him
Is this the end song?