

Silent Planet, SUPERBLOOM

Fast asleep, radio on, the static sings for no one
Idle on the coast when lights pour through my window
Interference starts to speak, transistors amplify our dreams
Drowning in the deepest blue midnight sun, eclipsing you

I'll find you weightless in the Superbloom
This can't be a dream if it's not with you

I couldn't wait to catch my breath, violet halos wrap your head
A bioluminescent garden springs up from the surface
Do you remember the way you were haunted?
Couldn't escape, but we knew there was something more
Voices echo in the atmosphere
Show me how to disappear

I'll find you weightless in the Superbloom
This can't be a dream if it's not with you
So let me down, I'll gather flowers for your crown
We return for perfect circles

They follow me, they follow me
They speak in subtle frequencies
There's so much space between our skin
Let the moment die and begin again
They follow me, they follow me
And I'm slowly starting to believe
That we're something more than flesh and bones
We're the gods that emerged from chemicals
They follow me, they follow me
Unbinding me from gravity
With nothing left but to be consumed
I'll rest for now in the Superbloom

Fast asleep, breathing slow
Drifting through the interstellar afterglow
Our shadows surrender to a midnight sun
See how even darkness can be undone
I was only human for this moment
To see the ocean in your eyes split open
You can tell it to the world, we won't be found
We've become one with The Sound