Sum 41, Rise Up

I told you I'd rise up

You'd be mistaken if you thought I was gone Cause I've been waiting for this moment too long (whoa oh) Just to see the worry in your eyes I bet you thought that I had fallen away It never crossed your mind that there'd be a day (whoa oh) I'd return to look into your eyes

Don't pray for me You said there's no hope in forgiving You're happy to just leave me for the dead Well time has passed I'm very much the living And all that's left is to leave you seeing red

So when you think you've got me by a thread You need to think again Cause I know you never thought this would be how it ends I told you I'd rise up

I don't believe that you have got any soul You're just a breed of your own kind all alone (whoa oh) An architect of your own decline (your own decline) Nothing's sacred anymore that's the past It's falling further even more out of grasp (whoa oh) You're replaced and running out of time

No prayers from me You see, I'm not the one you think, will Just let it go and leave it all behind You're dead to me and I don't even feel guilt Just take a look cause it's time for me to rise

So when you think you've got me by a thread You need to think again Cause I know you never thought this would be how it ends I told you I'd rise up

I told you I'd rise up

I don't want to close my eyes I can never get enough Like the sun it's time that I rise up

So when you think you've got me by a thread You need to think again Cause I know you never thought this would be how it ends I told you I'd rise up

I told you I'd rise up I told you I'd rise up
