The Alan Parsons Project, The Eagle Will Rise Ag

Lead Vocal: Colin Blunstone

And I could easily fall from grace Then another would take my place For the chance to behold your face

As the days of my life are but grains of sand As they fall from your open hand At the call of the wind's command

Many words are spoken when there's nothing to say
The fall upon the ears of those who don't know the way
To read between the lines, that lead between the lines, that lead me to you

All that I ask you Is, show me how to follow you and I'll obey Teach me how to reach you I can't find my own way Let me see the light, let me be the light

As the sun turns slowly around the sky Till the shadow of night is high The eagle will learn to fly

As the days of his life are but grains of sand As they fall from your open hand And vanish upon the land

Many words are spoken when there's nothing to say
The fall upon the ears of those who don't know the way
To read between the lines, that lead between the lines, that lead me to you
Show me how to follow you and I'll obey
Teach me how to reach you I can't find my own way
Let me see the light, let me be the light
And so, with no warning, no last goodbye
In the dawn of the morning sky
The eagle will rise again
