

The Bears, Dave

he counted up his fears one day and they weren't worth a dime he cried a lot of tears for her cause he wasn't worth her time and his life felt like a marathon - man, how long can this last? he slowed down for a little drink and didn't see the winner pass last Saturday morning we missed the warning the pain got boring - his soul went soaring she used to be too young to understand and now she's just too old can't shut the door on her regrets - she'll never be that cold and i could have been a better friend - i can see where i went wrong i hid beneath my selfishness like i hide behind this song
nothing lasts forever cept maybe jesus christ and nothing could be sadder than a child taking his own life i heard the minister mumble, i heard the falling rain and i felt my mother's hand slip into mine and none of us have ever been the same
