The Black Dahlia Murder, Elder Misanthropy wisdom infinite, held tightly in my grasp my sword one thousand battles strong ageless i remain, beyond the reach of death indebted by my soul

i have witnessed the birthing of your faith the tribulations, the driving of the stake so slowly this immortal coil unwinds until the end -- the end of fucking time blood of the ancient one is burning through my veins the blood of gods man's never known i am the one who cannot die i am the killer for all time seeds of infinite hate i've sown i walk the earth enshrouded in its darkness eclipsing, i claim the flesh of man ageless i remain with vengeance on my breath revolted by the meek

i have witnessed the birthing of your faith the tribulations, the driving of the stake so slowly this immortal coil unwinds this crumbing world -- has become mine

see the creation of this world see it all reduced to ash in the blink of a sunken eye i see one hundred winters pass my blessing, my curse perpetually i'm damned to earth of a soul i am bereft forever dying to be dead

slipping through centuries untouched by human love void of the simple pleasures that human life provides forever bound, i lie in wait, undying -- and insane

see the creation of this world see it all reduced to ash in the blink of a sunken eye i see one hundred winters pass my blessing, my curse perpetually i'm damned to earth of a soul i am bereft forever dying to be dead!