The Carpenters, Crystal Lullaby

Listen to the song he sings Can't you see his music brings her Crystal sleep

As her heavy eyelids fall He's taking her to where the dolls Rule the world

And in that land of make believe Is where he'll leave her sleeping Softly warm In a crystal lullaby

He's weaving her a paper castle Where dancing clowns with tassels made of fur Welcome her into their world That lives inside the dreams Of every little girl

She's guarded by a brave tin soldier Sitting on her shoulder Taken there In a crystal lullaby

Sometimes when I listen to The velvet song that fills the summer afternoon Something deep within me sighs And wishes for the peaceful skies Of long ago

(*) That wrapped my cares In silver air And carried them away Leaving me ... And a crystal lullaby
