The Forecast, Exorcise Demons

" it's getting late and i must be on my way its five am and the city's sleeping and im not far behind" " just stay for one more drink and i will let you go because nights like this don't happen anymore" " lets talk about all the feelings that we have like life love pain and regret" " the only thing i regret is not speaking my mind and that its too late to fall back on my word" way down deep in our heads we know we cant let this happen its friday night and the city lights are dancing on my eyes so will you drive me home rain pours on the road coast to coast and you'll be home unless you call me if i called and said hello and shared the secrets that i hold would you run or stay with me tonight "my world holds your weight boy, my world holds your weight, you'll be gone in the morning, so call back today"