Uriah Heep, War Child

Open your eyes, you're still here Still safe, at peace in this world So great, you're free You don't have to fight for your life But just say, just say There's fire from the sky And you're burning alive

Why all this pain and Posion in her mind What can you change When hatred made her blind soldiers No reason to look into her eyes No one to hold her No one who really cares

Lifeless expression
Destroyed all conceptions
For children in the street
Who's there to help you
When all is forgotten and
Torn apart by fear
No one to hold her
No one who really cares

The struggle for power
The grows by the hour
Like the blood beneath her feet
Dispering with heartache
There must be somebody
To help her in such need
No one to hold her
No one who really cares

Open your eyes, you're still here Still safe, at peace in this world So great, you're free You don't have to fight for your life War child
