Vaya Con Dios, Heading For A Fall

A turn of the key
And the door is pushed open, now
He walks into the room
But doesn't take off his coat
Kisses me softly
Without saying a word, now
There's that look in his eys
That makes me feel the cold

When I try to find out
'Bout what's troubling his mind
He turns away and sights
And says: 'give me some time"
Maybe things will get better
If I learn to be patient
What I wanted was love not an imitation

And I know it We're heading for a fall (for a fall We're heading for a fall)

We lie between sheets
And he stares at the ceiling now
Me, I'm trying to sleep
But I'm trembling inside
If she is haunting his dreams
Then why don't he say it now?
Why stay if it's her that he wants in the end?

If he tried to explain I'd try to understand Maybe I'd feel the same I'm not sure of myself We surrendered so soon In the arms of temptation, now What I wanted was love not an imitation

And I know it We're heading for a fall (for a fall We're heading for a fall)
